◆◆ Theme

Advancing Criminological and Criminal Justice Theories from Asia

Most of the current criminological and criminal justice theories have been developed in Western countries. Those theories have been presented as general theories in spite of such limitation. They should not be able to claim themselves as general theories unless they are tested in Asia which occupies more than a half of the world population and has some of the most rapidly developing countries. The general theme of this conference is based on this perception. It intends to test criminological and criminal justice theories with data about crime and criminal justice practices in Asia and to move on further to present new criminological and criminal justice theories from Asia. Japan arguably has the largest number of criminologists and criminal justice scholars in Asia, and this conference in Japan is appropriate as a forum to pursue such an ambitious purpose.

◆◆Asian Criminological Society (ACS)

The Asian Criminological Society (ACS) is a non-profit academic organization established in 2009 under the initiative of Professor Jianhong Liu of the University of Macau. The mission of the Society is four-fold: 1) to promote the study of criminology and criminal justice across Asia; 2) to enhance co-operation in the fields of criminology and criminal justice by scholars and practitioners; 3) to encourage communication between criminologists and criminal justice practitioners in Asia and the world through publications and conferences; 4) to foster training and research in criminology and criminal justice in institutions of learning, and in criminal justice agencies.

Its inaugural conference was held in Macau in 2009. Since then its annual conferences have been held in various parts of Asia: Chennai (2010), Taipei (2011), Seoul (2012), and Mumbai (2013), each of which has attracted 200 or more participants.

It has approximately 150 members on its membership directory, and the Asian Journal of Criminology, a peer-reviewed scholarly journal published by Springer, is the official journal of the ACS. To join the society, you can do so online or write to the office in Macau.

◆◆About Osaka and Vicinity

Osaka's main international airport is the Kansai International Airport. There is also the Osaka Airport at Itami, which handles the domestic and short distance overseas flights. If your flight arrives at other major cities of Japan, you can either catch a domestic flight to the Osaka Itami Airport, or travel by a bullet train (shinkansen) to Shin-osaka station, or by other JR express trains to Osaka station.

Osaka is called the aqua capital because of its numerous rivers and canals running through the city; water buses and scenic cruises are available to explore the city departing from the famous Osaka Castle, and other places. Osaka is also famous for its gourmet food. It offers traditional cuisine of sushi, shabu-shabu, sukiyaki, kaiseki, donburi-mono, takoyaki and so on with ranging prices, as well as food from all over the world.

Osaka is also conveniently located in the proximity of Kyoto and Nara; many of the world heritage sites are located in both cities as they were once the capital cities of Japan. Kobe, a fashionable port city, is also close by. It will be hot and humid during the conference in Osaka with the average temperature of 20-28 degrees Celsius. All the buildings, shops, taxis, trains etc. in Japan are comfortably air-conditioned. You will need your summer clothes, but may also need a light jacket or cardigan when you are inside the building.
